

Submitting Manuscripts to Applied Economic Perspectives and Policy

AAEA invites submission of papers to its newest journal, Applied Economic Perspectives and Policy (AEPP). AEPP will publish submitted articles, subject to a double-blind review process, that meet high quality standards for scholarly publication in applied economics. Submitted articles should accomplish at least one of the following purposes:

- Present original research emphasizing practical implications for public policy
- Present new economic perspectives by synthesizing and integrating established literature
- Elucidate the practical policy implications of existing research
- Present empirical comparisons of competing theories, explanations, or approaches
- Derive and elucidate the implications of existing literature for future research directions.

AEPP will publish contributions to applied economics across a range of issues:

- Agriculture
- Development
- Education
- Energy
- Environment
- Finance
- Food and consumer issues
- Health
- Natural resources
- Regional and rural issues

AEPP will present high-quality research in a forum that is informative to broad audiences of agricultural and applied economists, including those outside as well as inside academia and those not immediately conversant with the subject matter of the articles. Some ways for authors to achieve this are:

- Introduce topics in a way that will attract, and be understandable to, readers from a wide variety of backgrounds.
- State arguments and results in English rather than math where possible. When mathematics is used, provide verbal explanations of mathematical results that are informative to broad audiences.
- Relegate substantial mathematics to an appendix that need not be digested in order to understand the article.
- Emphasize drawing out the practical (e.g., policy-relevant) implications with clear intuitive and graphical explanations.

AEPP's objectives are to stimulate insights and promote cross-fertilization among sub-fields of agricultural and applied economics to:

- Broaden understanding
- Foster integrative research
- Increase knowledge and communication among analysts, researchers, and policymakers about the impacts of public policy.

AEPP also will publish commissioned featured articles focusing on the synthesis and integration of applied research and on future research agendas.

AEPP is a quarterly journal sponsored by the Agricultural & Applied Economics Association and published by Oxford University Press. For more information, visit
